in the delayed consideration of the measure if it saves us six months or a year of business depression, lack of confidence and the failure of taxes, which might defeat the entire war programme."

Senator Lodge laid particular emphasis upon the need for deliberate consideration of the vast powers which the measure proposes to confer on the President.

He said, in part:

"That which troubles me in this bill is the fact that it is an attempt to set aside and disregard economic law and the national laws which exist and which control in a large measure the distribution and the sale of all products. The bill undertakes to give a measure the undertakes to give a measure the distribution and the sale of all products. they were any better fitted for executive functions, and they were not.

A One-Man Problem

"I have no reflection to make on anybody who will be concerned in that work. I have a very great admiration for the work Mr. Hoover did in Belgium. No one could admire it more than I do. But the problem to be met in Belgium, serious as it was, is nothing compared to undertaking to run the whole business of the United States. That is beyond the power of any one man or any collection of men.
